Dear Maria,

I have reached out to you on 3/6/15 to try and start a dialogue on your husband's behavior and today marks a month of giving you time to process this. After two failed attempts at phone calls (both times you hung up within two minutes), I haven't heard back from you after numerous attempts to discuss this situation. I have tried to be as sympathetic as possible in this situation but this issue needs to be addressed and just ignoring it, isn't going to make it go away. This situation needs to be dealt with before it gets bigger and I am giving you a chance to be part of the solution and not the problem.

I hope you had a chance to reflect on this in church yesterday and I hope you are praying about it too. I am going to give it until Friday night and then continue the process but in the months and years to come, please know I gave you every opportunity to fix this before it got bigger.

I will continue to pray for a successful conclusion to this problem.

With the upmost sincerity,
